PART VII– DISCIPLINARY AND GRIEVANCE PROCESSES

Commentary:

This part is included as it is good practice to include it in any constitutional framework. This Part sets out the general principles and further details are set out in the Ordinances and Regulations. It should be noted that the processes set out in Statutes and Ordinances do not replace or take precedence over those that exist in the affiliates of ITF England. The aim is to set out the process that will apply in respect of actions arising from members of ITF England acting on behalf of ITF England and in certain cases as an appeal mechanism for individual members of ITF England. It should be noted, however, that in all cases all processes within the relevant affiliate must have been exhausted. ITF England will only address issues where there is a clear case of maladministration has occurred in the consideration of cases within an affiliate and it will not reconsider evidence and other matters that must take place in the affiliates. It is also recognised that the level of maturity of disciplinary and grievance systems may be different in the affiliates within ITF England and the Statutes and Ordinances provide a framework that might be adopted. The key issue is that all affiliates have a clear process in place.

A. Procedure for determining the membership of disciplinary and related panels established to examine cases, and related procedural matters

Preamble to Statute VII

For the avoidance of doubt this Statute Part VII and Ordinance VII is intended neither to replace the disciplinary and grievance procedures that exist in any affiliate of ITF England, nor does it aim to interfere with investigations of competent authorities, for example the Police, Local Authorities etc. Where, and when, necessary the procedure laid down in Statutes and Ordinances may be possible, in exceptional cases, to be used as an appeal mechanism should this be required to resolve disciplinary and grievance issues within an affiliate of ITF England. ITF England would expect that these will be few in number as such matters should be dealt via the procedures within the affiliate of ITF England.

The process set out in this Statute VII and Ordinance VII will apply, in all cases, to any persons who have a role in ITF England, whether paid or unpaid, including Officers and other Members of the Board. Additional arrangements which relate to Officers and Members of the Board are set out in Statutes and Part IV, Section G. However, these procedures will be used, as amended by Statute and Ordinance for Officers and other Members of the Board, to all persons who act on behalf of ITF England. Such persons will either have been Elected or have been appointed to the relevant role or position by the Congress and/ or the Board. This will include those appointed or co-opted on an ad hoc basis.

B. Application and scope

141. This Part prescribes processes to address disciplinary and grievance matters in relation to (a) charges brought against members acting in a capacity on behalf of ITF England excluding Board Members which is covered in Part IV, Section G above and (b) cases which are referred to the Board for action by an individual or an affiliate where there is believed to be a misapplication of procedure in the relevant affiliate, in such cases ITF England will not act unless, and until, that procedures relevant in that affiliate have been completed. In addition, the Board reserves the right to reserve any investigation pending the outcome of investigations by the affiliate or a competent body, such as the Police, and the Courts:

- a) the procedures for the appointment of members of the panels specified in Part VII of these Statutes, these being in relation to:
 - i. a hearing to consider charges brought under the Serious Misconduct under the procedure pursuant to the provisions set out in Ordinance VII, Part III;
 - ii. an appeal against a penalty imposed for such serious misconduct;
 - iii. a hearing to consider dismissal on other grounds;
 - iv. an appeal against dismissal on other grounds;
 - v. a grievance appeal panel.

hearing.

In the case of an appeal hearing, the appeal may review all aspects of the case, but shall not normally take the form of a re-hearing of the evidence, and witnesses may only be called with the appeal panel's permission, which shall normally only be given if there is good reason why the evidence was not available at the previous hearing.
153. Any panel appointed pursuant to the provisions of this Part VII shall notify the member of the reasons for its decision, in writing, which shall also be reported to the Board.

A member of the Board or another not previously involved in the case to be heard by a panel shall be designated by the Secretary General, with the agreement of the Chair of the Panel, to act as Secretary to the Panel. The person so appointed shall be required to provide the panel with any documentation that it deems to be necessary, to take notes at the panel hearing, and to give clerical assistance to the panel in the preparation of its report.
